

Membership and Student Fees for 2009

Annual membership and student fees will be due soon. Members and students will receive their renewal package in early December 2008. For students of the Accredited Accounting Technician examination, there will be a slight increase in the student fee to HK$600, while the membership fee stays at HK$600. These fees will be due on 1 January 2009.

All members and students are obliged to pay the annual fees before the due date. Delay or failure to settle fees for more than three months will result in removal of the member's or student's name from the register. Members and students whose names are removed must pay their registration fees again in order for their status to be re-instated on the membership or student register. Students who have claimed exemptions before will also be required to pay the prevailing exemption fees again and must abide by the closing dates for registration for the examinations.

Members are further reminded that they are required to return their completed CPD Declaration Form to us to ensure that their membership can be renewed. For more information on CPD requirements, please visit the "Continuing Professional Development" section of our website.

Both members and students are reminded that the annual update form must be returned together with their payment. Please make sure you notify us of any changes in your personal information – particularly e-mail addresses, as we intend to increase our communication with our members and students via the Internet in the coming year.
